

Candesic appoints COO to help drive growth plans

Specialist consultancy firm Candesic has appointed Christian Teixidor as chief operating officer.

Teixidor, who has experience of scaling up businesses across professional services at various stages of evolution, will support the Candesic team in its planned expansion.

Candesic has doubled in size in recent years and has ambitions to double again in the medium term. The current team comprises around 40 professionals with business, medical, science and technology backgrounds.

Teixidor has held a number of client facing roles in investment banking, both in London and in New York, and will support Candesic in its bid to gain market share across its key sector and geographic markets.

Commenting on his appointment, Candesic managing partner Leonid Shapiro said: 'Christian joins us at an exciting period at Candesic and brings the right mix of commercial and operational experience to boost our growth ambitions.'

'While we are an established and leading healthcare consulting firm, Christian will play a central role in growing our talent pool, increasing the breadth of our services to clients and increasing our investment in technology to empower our analysis and workflows.'
